Payment for the fall semester is due no later than July 31. Payment for the spring semester is due no later than December 31. Payment for the summer semester is due no later than June 30.

Chapman University offers a Tuition Payment Plan that may be used in conjunction with financial aid. This plan allows payment of tuition in five equal monthly payments. A promissory note is required for each semester that a student has either financial aid or requests the payment plan. Please contact the university Business Office for information.

Interest is calculated at 10.75% per annum based on the monthly outstanding balance.

Students may not attend classes until all tuition and fees have been paid or the required promissory note and financial aid forms have been filed.

Textbooks

Required and suggested texts for each course are announced before the beginning of the semester. Most new casebooks cost approximately $50 and most courses require separate textbooks. In some cases, professors also supplement the casebook with school-prepared or other materials. Students should plan their expenses accordingly for books.

Tuition Adjustment Policy

Students who withdraw from the university after first notifying the School of Law and filing the appropriate withdrawal/drop forms will have their tuition (less deposits) adjusted according to the following schedule:

- By the end of the first week of classes: 100%
- By the end of the second week of classes: 65%
- By the end of the third week of classes: 35%
- By the end of the fourth week of classes: 10%
- After the fourth week of classes: 0%

Tuition Insurance Plan

Chapman University has contracted with AWG Dewar to offer a Tuition Insurance Plan which guarantees a refund of all monies paid to the school in the event that a student has to withdraw from a semester because of serious illness or accident after the published tuition credit deadlines have passed. The cost is approximately 1% of the annual charges. Further information is available in the University’s Business Office.

Scholarships

First Year Students

The Admissions Committee awards merit based scholarships to entering first year students with notable academic credentials. The Admissions Office generally notifies recipients of these scholarships at the same time that an offer of admission is extended. For 2001-02, Chapman law awarded over $1.5 million in scholarship aid to entering students. Over 75% of the class received scholarships ranging from $2300 to full tuition. Merit based scholarships are renewable for a second year depending on class ranking after completion of the first year. Any applicant who wishes to be considered for scholarship assistance must complete and file the Application for Admission as early as possible since scholarship funds may be exhausted late in the admissions cycle. The scholarships available at Chapman University School of Law include C.C. Chapman Law Scholarships, President’s Law Scholarships, Dean’s Law Scholarships, Provost’s Law Scholarships, and Academic Law Scholarships.

Admitted applicants who have received an offer for a scholarship must submit a completed Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to the federal processor as soon after January 1 as possible. (The Federal School Code for Chapman University School of Law is E009967.) It is not necessary to wait until you have filed your 2001 tax returns. You may use estimated income figures on the FAFSA. Corrections to estimated income figures will be made when a complete financial aid application packet has been submitted.
submitted and your tax returns have been filed. Students who receive a scholarship offer must also complete the Preliminary Financial Aid Application enclosed with this catalog.

Continuing Students
Continuing students are automatically reviewed for academic scholarship eligibility. Second year students who are not eligible for a retained first year merit-based scholarship will go through a ranking process based on their law school GPA to determine eligibility for academic performance scholarships. Third and fourth year students will automatically go through a ranking process to determine academic scholarships. Although scholarship criteria are reviewed and adjusted annually, in the past students who have ranked in the top 30% of their class have been eligible for a scholarship. Merit-based ranking scholarships are awarded on a sliding scale according to class standing. Scholarships may not be applied to summer classes or classes taken at another institution. Students who convert from part-time to full-time status are cautioned that their scholarship awards will be limited to the dollar value as calculated on their part-time status at the time they were ranked. Full-time students converting to part-time status will have their scholarship awards calculated as a percentage of part-time tuition. Other restrictions as to the eligibility for scholarships are stated in the Financial Aid Handbook.

Financial Aid
Chapman University School of Law offers a range of loan programs including Federal Stafford Loans (subsidized and unsubsidized), Federal Perkins Loans, private educational loans, short-term emergency loans, and bar examination loans to meet the needs of eligible students. Each loan program has specific eligibility and repayment terms. Many local bar associations, corporations, community groups, and fraternal organizations offer scholarships, grants and loans to students pursuing a law degree. Students are encouraged to research these opportunities by contacting such organizations directly or through the Internet at www.fastweb.com or www.finaid.org. Because the primary responsibility for financing a legal education remains with students and their families, financial aid is offered to supplement their contributions.

Law students are considered independent for purposes of financial aid. This means that students who live with their parents while attending Chapman University School of Law will not have their parents' income included in determining a financial aid award. However, married students will have their spouse's income used in the calculation. Financial need is determined by subtracting the expected family contribution from the cost of a Chapman legal education. Family contribution is a figure determined by the U.S. Department of Education based on the taxable and non-taxable income, asset valuation (excluding residence), and family information as submitted on the FAFSA application. The cost of education includes tuition, fees, books, supplies, and estimated living expenses. A total financial aid package, including all need based and non-need based loans and scholarships, cannot exceed the cost of education as determined by federal regulations and guidelines. Student aid is to be used for educational expenses only.

A legal education is a serious commitment that requires thoughtful planning and serious budgeting. Wise decisions and prudent borrowing will reduce the burden of future debt and provide more flexibility in future legal employment options. Additional information is available by contacting the Financial Aid Office at (714) 628-2510.

Estimated Living Expenses
Chapman University School of Law uses a standardized budget when calculating the allowance for student living expenses. The cost of living budget is based on institutional costs, Bureau of Labor statistics, U.S. Department Of Education guidelines, local housing and transportation costs and is determined according to Chapman University School of Law policies and procedures and federal regulations. Federal regulations require that budgets cover only the period of enrollment. The 2001-02 cost of living and transportation budget allowance (excluding tuition, books and fees) for students who do not reside with their parents is $53,236. Summer living expenses may be included if the student is enrolled in at least six credit hours during the summer session. The cost of living and transportation budget allowance for students who reside with their parents is $53,236. Discretionary items such as car payments and credit card debt can not be included in calculating eligibility. For this reason, entering law students are advised to clear all accumulated credit card debt prior to enrolling.
Non-Discrimination Policy

It is the policy of the Chapman University School of Law not to discriminate on the basis of race, sex, national or ethnic origin, sexual orientation, age, disability, marital status, or sexual or affectional preference in its educational programs, admission policies, employment policies, financial aid, or other school-administered programs. This policy is enforced by federal law under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990.

Eligibility Criteria

The U.S. Department of Education establishes eligibility criteria for federal financial aid programs. To be eligible, a student must:
- be a U.S. citizen or eligible non-citizen;
- if required, be registered with the Selective Service;
- be admitted to and attending a participating university at least half-time (defined as six credit hours at Chapman University School of Law);
- be working toward a degree or certificate;
- be making satisfactory academic progress as defined by the institution;
- and,
- not owe a refund on a federal grant or be in default on a federal educational loan.

International students who are not eligible for need-based financial aid are still eligible for merit-based scholarships.

Financial Aid Application Procedures

Applicants who anticipate a need for financial aid should complete and mail the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to the federal processor as soon after January 1 as possible. (The Federal School Code for Chapman University School of Law is E00867.) It is not necessary to wait until you have filed your 2001 tax returns. You may use estimated income figures on the FAFSA. Corrections to estimated income figures will be made when complete financial aid application packet has been submitted and your tax returns have been filed. The FAFSA form is available at all college and university financial aid and admissions office early in January. The FAFSA can also be downloaded and completed electronically at www.ed.gov/offices/OPE/express.html.

Applicants must also complete the Preliminary Financial Aid Application enclosed with this catalog. Applicants who receive an admission offer will receive an estimate of their financial aid offer. Additional financial aid information and forms will be provided when the admission offer has been accepted and all required deposits have been paid. Students are provided status updates in writing during the financial aid application process and when the Financial Aid Office receives each disbursement. All financial aid recipients are required to attend an entrance interview before the first disbursement will be applied to their student account and an exit interview session before graduation.

Financial aid is administered according to and in compliance with Chapman University School of Law’s policies and procedures and U.S. Department of Education regulations. These policies and regulations require the completion, coordination, and verification of many sources of information and documentation. It is the applicant’s responsibility to provide all requested documentation in a timely manner. The Financial Aid Office reserves the right to adjust or cancel an award as circumstances dictate or should a student fail to comply with regulations or guidelines of Chapman University School of Law and the U.S. Department of Education.

Federal Stafford Subsidized and Unsubsidized Loans. The federal government guarantees these low interest loans. Disbursement of funds is subject to federal regulations, which require equal disbursements at the beginning of each semester. Financial aid applicants should be prepared to purchase books and supplies and cover living expenses during the first thirty days of each semester. Students may apply for a maximum of $31,500 in federal loans per academic year, of which $27,500 can be subsidized (8.5%) and unsubsidized ($10,000) loan funds, with an aggregate limit of $138,500 for all undergraduate and graduate borrowing. Students who do not qualify for the full $8,500 in Stafford Subsidized Loan funds may increase the unsubsidized loan amount to the annual combined maximum of $18,500. The federal government pays the interest on the Stafford Subsidized Loan while the student is in school. Because the Stafford Subsidized Loan is not a need-based loan, interest accrues while the student is in school and is capitalized at repayment, unless payments are made by the student while attending school. The current rate is variable with a cap of 8.25%. Repayment for both types of loans begins six months after enrollment ceases and extends for ten years. A list of Stafford lenders will be provided to financial aid applicants who are admitted to Chapman University School of Law. Each student who applies for Stafford Loans must complete a federal promissory note.

Federal Perkins Loans. These loans are available to eligible students who complete and submit their FAFSA before March 1. Students must have remaining need after borrowing the maximum of $18,500 in Federal Stafford Loans. Perkins Loan funds are awarded on a first come, first serve basis depending on availability of funds. The current interest rate is 5%. Students awarded Perkins Loans are required to sign a promissory note and attend an entrance interview before loan funds can be credited to their account. Perkins Loan funds are not awarded for courses attended in summer or for courses attended at another institution.

Private Educational Loans. Private loans are available to students who have unmet need, based on the determined cost of education less any other scholarships and/or financial assistance received. Annual maximums are generally between $12,000 and $15,000, depending on the lender chosen. Private educational loans are based on credit history and ability to repay as determined by the lender. Interest rates are based on market indicators and vary from lender to lender. Most lenders allow interest to be deferred until enrollment ceases or drops below half-time. An eligible co-borrower may be required. The law school’s Financial Aid Office is not involved in the credit evaluation process. Private educational loan borrowing should be done conservatively and as a last resort.

Emergency Loans. Emergency loans are available up to a maximum of $300 and are granted to students who have a valid emergency and can demonstrate the ability to repay the loan according to terms as required by the Chapman University Student Business Services Office. Applications are available in the law school’s Financial Aid Office.

Bar Examination Loans. Bar loans are available to graduating students who may need financial assistance in order to prepare for and take a bar examination. Loan approval is based on the borrower's credit history and ability to repay as determined by the lender. Information and applications for bar loans are available in the law school’s Financial Aid Office.

Satisfactory Progress

Students must meet minimum satisfactory progress requirements in order to remain eligible for financial aid. Satisfactory progress measures include cumulative grade point average and time to completion of the degree. Students who fail to meet the minimum requirements are placed on financial aid probation for the succeeding semester. If satisfactory academic standing is not met, students are placed on non-satisfactory progress status and forfeit their financial aid eligibility. Students may regain eligibility when satisfactory progress standards have been met.
