

About This Guide

This guide explains what is available through Google Books and how to navigate this web-based search engine.

About Google Books

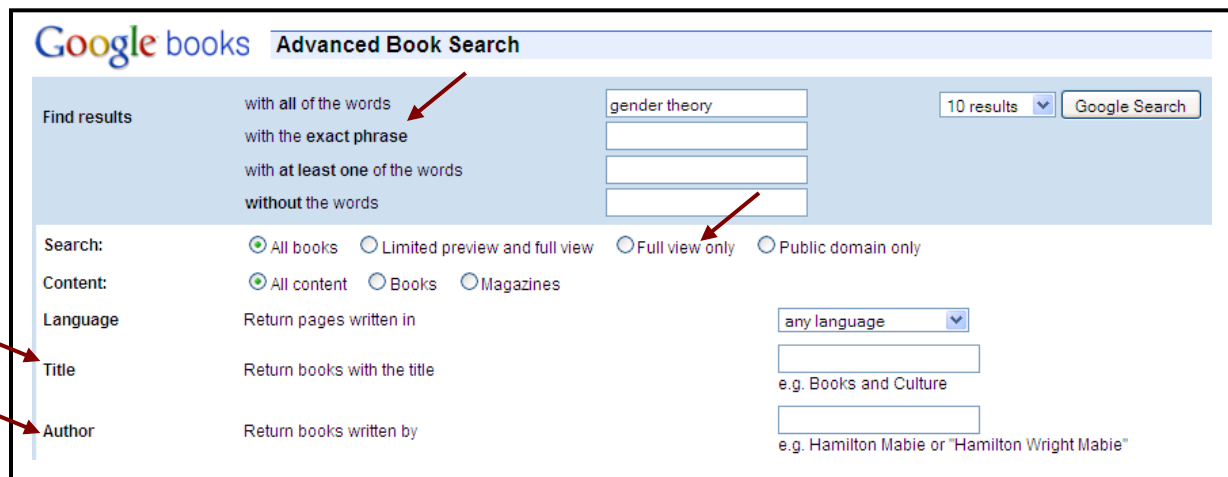

Google Books enables you to find full-text books or information about books that exist on your topic. Some magazines are also now included with Google Books. Depending on the title and its copyright or author's permissions, one of the following viewing options will be made available: Full View, Limited Preview, Snippet View, or No Preview Available. For more information about these viewing options, visit <http://books.google.com/intl/en/googlebooks/screenshots.html>. Google Books also provides full-text searching capabilities so that you can locate books containing your search terms. Titles that are out of copyright, as well as those afforded full-text viewing rights by the author, may be viewed in their entirety. Some of these full-text titles may be downloaded, saved and printed.

Note: Google Books does not provide an exhaustive catalog or full-text availability for all books that may be relevant to your topic. Therefore, you should also search the Leatherby Libraries Catalog, and possibly additional library catalogs, in conjunction with your Google Books searches. For instances when the full-text of a book is not available, you may request an Interlibrary Loan. Please see the "Interlibrary Loan" section of this guide for more information.

How to Access Google Books

The direct link is <http://books.google.com>. Or, from the Google homepage, www.google.com, select "Books" from the "More" drop-down menu.

Advanced Search Capabilities: Once Google books opens, instead of using the single search box, click on the link for "Advanced Book Search." Using the "Advanced Book Search" page allows you to search by title and author, search for exact phrases, and place other limitations. You can also limit your search to "Full view only" to retrieve only full-text books; realize when you do this, however, that you may not capture information about non full-text titles in your results that may also be relevant to your research.

How to Read a Google Books Citation

The information below can help you decipher the various parts of Google Books citations.

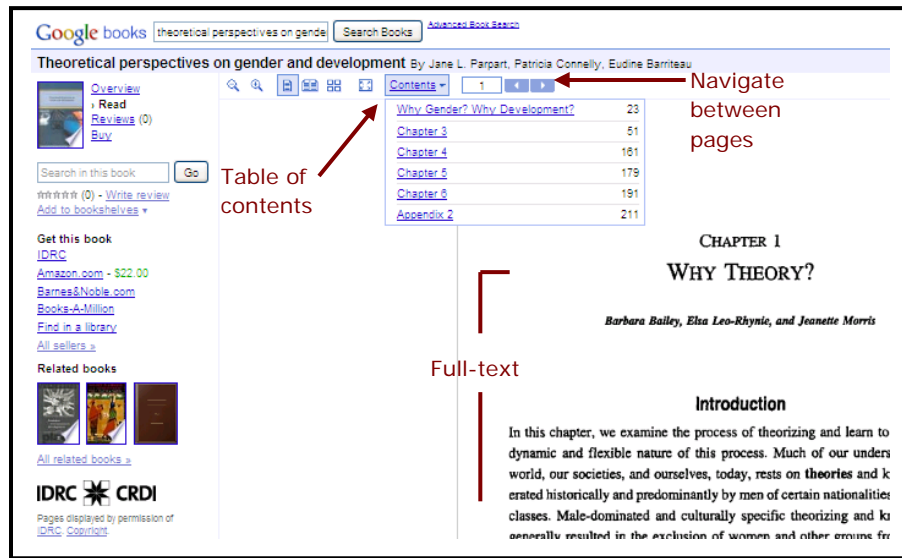

1	Theoretical perspectives on gender and development	2

books.google.com
Jane L. Parpart, Patricia Connelly, Eudine Barriteau - 2000 - 215 pages - Full view
Theoretical Perspectives on Gender and Development demystifies the theory of gender and development and shows how it plays an important role in everyday life.

Explanation of Links

- 1. Title – Links to an overview, a preview, or, if available, the full-text of a book.
- 2. Viewing Options – Lets you know if a Full View, Limited Preview, Snippet View, or No Preview is available.

Full-text Capabilities

View the table of contents by clicking the Contents link. Use the forward and back buttons to navigate between pages. Click the  button to view the book in full screen mode.

The screenshot shows the Google Books interface for the book 'Theoretical perspectives on gender and development' by Jane L. Parpart, Patricia Connelly, and Eudine Barriteau. The page is annotated with red arrows and text:

- An arrow points to the 'Contents' link in the top navigation bar, labeled 'Navigate between pages'.
- An arrow points to the 'Contents' link in the left sidebar, labeled 'Table of contents'.
- An arrow points to the 'Full-text' link in the left sidebar, labeled 'Full-text'.

The table of contents is visible, listing chapters and their page numbers:

Why Gender? Why Development?	23
Chapter 3	51
Chapter 4	161
Chapter 5	179
Chapter 6	191
Appendix 2	211

The main content area shows the start of Chapter 1, 'WHY THEORY?', by Barbara Bailey, Elsa Leo-Rhynie, and Jeanette Morris. The introduction text is visible below the chapter title.

Interlibrary Loan

When the full-text is not available through Google Books or the Leatherby Libraries Catalog, currently enrolled or employed Chapman University students, faculty, and staff may request books through Interlibrary Loan. For information on how to set up your Interlibrary Loan account, contact the Library's Interlibrary Loan department at myanez@chapman.edu / (714) 532-7719.
